

13. I. 1915.

My dear Mr de Kéozló,

I am sorry you are being worried by this old scoundrel. I believe the threat is mere bluff. You have told him what you are prepared to pay him for ^{work} ~~that~~ you acknowledge as (the photos in Guide's studio & the hoaille's prints) done to your order. The rest, as distinctly shown by your agreement, lies between himself and Hutchinson.
He has no more right to claim it from you than he has to claim it from me.

If you are anxious about the affair you had better ask your solicitor and show him the correspondence.

But I feel sure he would only tell you what I do.

I am in most nights after dinner and shall be glad to call one night if you send me word.

Yours sincerely

Oakley Williams
