

2nd July, 1932.

My dear Friend Wiley,

I wish to thank you for your letter, with the clippings from June 12th and 13th enclosed. I appreciate very much your attention in sending me these, and was very interested to read your speech in Hungary, where I hear from various friends you were so well received. I am glad to know you left my native country with such fine impressions.

We are all very well here, and like you in the States we are all hoping for better days.

I am nearing the completion of my portrait of the Archbishop of Canterbury, and begin to take pleasure in painting my big composition.

I hope you are well, and with best wishes from us both to you and Miss Wiley.

Always sincerely yours,
