Sir,

I have here a sketch (unfinished) painted by you, and given by John - to whom I think you gave it. It is a charming picture of a peasant and his daughter paying reverence to a crucifix. It was made I think in the Tyrol some years back.
I was wondering whether you would be so very good as to complete it which I think would only require a few touches. The child's face is left a blank as it now stands.

I should esteem it a very great favour.

With my regards and respects

Remain

Yours faithfully

Sir
Francis Fletcher-Vane
of Hutton.
