

12th October, 1937.

My dear Friend,

I have just received your registered letter and I thank you most heartily for sending the photographs. They are splendid, especially the one where I am sitting under the figure. It is a pity that those taken at Petworth are not more successful, but the light was certainly the reverse of helpful. I think to think of that visit and of the happy hour we spent amongst those art treasures.

Next time you write I must be very careful what I say to you in reply, as I see you make my private letters public goods! But I am quite prepared to leave it to your tact and discretion.

I am sending you herewith a photograph which was taken in the studio, quite recently, surrounded by my present works and I look forward to reading your article in the Anglo-Hungarian Quarterly, which I am sure, coming from your pen, will be very interesting and attractive. I am glad to say I feel better daily and am at work as usual in my studio, trying to keep away from outside excitements.

I am interested to know that the Duchess of Atholl has been invited by Countess Apponyi to visit Budapest and I hope you were present at her lecture. She is very intelligent and a very old friend of ours. She used to be very beautiful. Do let me know how the lecture came off.

I do hope that by the time this letter reaches you you will have fully recovered from your indisposition. The world is very full of anxiety - let us hope that in the course of this year humanity will have become more Christian in spirit. Tell me how you are all in Hungary - all our mutual friends. I am still looking for good news from Dr. Legrady. Remember me to Dr. Kornis and we send our warmest greetings to your dear wife. Do let me hear from you soon again.
