SOCIAL GOSSIP.

Noteworthy Portraits at the Grosvenor Gallery.

A number of pictures of well-known people are to be seen at the exhibition of the National Portrait Society, which opened at the Grosvenor Gallery yesterday.

Among them the portraits of the Duke of Portland, by Mr. Ambrose McEvoy, and Lord Plunket, by Mr. Cecil Jameson, will attract a good deal of attention, and also that of Lord Edward Grosvenor by Mr. John Lavery.

Mr. Philip de Laszlo has painted a splendid picture of the Dowager Lady Leconfield, who is a sister of Lord Rosebery, and Mr. Ambrose McEvoy has another picture—that of Lady Esher.

Mr. and Mrs. McKenna's children appear from the brush of Mr. Harrington Mann, and other portraits are those of Sir Philip Sassoon, Mr. Thomas Becham, Miss Iris Tree (painted by Mr. Augustus John), Mrs. Elinor Glyn by Mr. de Laszlo, and the Dean of Rochester.

Over 200 works of art in pictures or sculpture were contributed by Scottish artists to the exhibition held in Glasgow for the relief of artists in distress through the war.

These have just been balloted for, the tickets being disposed of at five guineas each, and every subscriber gained a prize.

Lord Newlands' two pictures were by brothers—Mr. John and Mr. J. Morris Henderson. Lord Guthrie also obtained a picture by the latter, while Sir Robert Usher, Sir Thomas Glen-Coats, Sir John Stirling-Maxwell, and Sir George Paul were others who had tickets.
