POPE'S PORTRAIT AT OXFORD.

The Bodleian Library at Oxford has now a portrait of Pope Pius XI hanging on its walls. This is a gift of the distinguished Anglo-Hungarian artist, Mr Philip de Lazlo, to whom the Pope gave a number of sittings last year. The portrait, which is said to be an excellent likeness, represents the Pope in his house cassock.

The Bodleian is, particularly interested in the present Pope, whom it may claim as its most exalted student, whether of the past or the present; for His Holiness made a prolonged stay in Oxford whilst carrying out his historical researches at the Bodleian.
