Squire on Hardy

Next week's issue of T.P.'s AND CASSELL'S WEEKLY will be a special Spring Book Number, and will contain many interesting features in addition to the symposium I have mentioned. There will be an article by Mr. J. C. Squire on the early poems of Thomas Hardy, a subject which gives Mr. Squire exceptional scope for the qualities which have placed him among the leading English critics. Mr. Philip de Laszlo, the famous portrait painter, has many interesting things to record under the heading of "The Days of My Youth," and Mr. Thomas Burke and Colonel Arthur Lynch are other notable contributors. This number will be considerably enlarged. But despite that, the price will remain at twopence.
