Dear Mr. de Laszlo,

I quite understand what you say regarding Sir Robert Gresley's account, but I think the items which make it up are essentially ones that he ought to bear, given the fact that we received direct instructions from him. But let me thank you for your letter I received this morning, and though I am rather occupied at the moment, if you would allow me to ring you up, I would let you know what afternoon I could come and take tea with you, for I can assure you that I am looking forward very much to having a chat with you.

We have written to-day to Sir Charles Markham, and I hope to let you know in a day or two that the honorarium is to hand. It is rather strange that he has ignored your letters, and on the face of it, it seems somewhat discourteous.

I hope you are keeping well, and with kind remembrances,

Yours sincerely,

R. D. Wicksteed
