My dear friend,

I believe you are back from Holland and as I am at the moment sitting under your portrait of Cuzon I am prompted to send a message of welcome home again.
My household has had a letter from the young student of Cambridge which seems to show that he has started off very happily. What about the varnishing

and framing of my portrait, on which you have expended so much talent and such endless pains, for all of which I and mine

will ever remember
with gratitude the name of Laszlo.
If the portrait is ready to be seen, I should ask if I might bring one or two friends to See it, or — (perhaps better) — should inquire whether it might be sent to Cordogan Sanders.

We will hang it and ask you to come &
give us your counsel.

Yours ever truly

John Simon

P.S. (1) I should like to have some copies of the photograph if you are arranging this.
(2) I can't help thinking that it is best to glaze it. Don't you?
